ABSTRACT

This document reports and analyzes direct technical assistance to school districts for the calendar year 1969. More than 6,400 requests for technical assistance were serviced from 1,300 school districts; approximately three-fourths of these requests were from Southern and border states. A major service was assisting school systems with the development of comprehensive desegregation plans. Other forms of assistance included disestablishment of dual school systems and operation of training programs, workshops, and summer institutes. (Author/DM)

TITLE IV OF THE CIVIL RIGHTS OF 1964
Office of Education
Division of Equal Educational Opportunities

Technical Assistance Survey,
January 1, 1969 - December 31, 1969

Direct technical assistance rendered by Division of Equal Educational Opportunities staff, the University School Desegregation Assistance Centers and State education agency Title IV Units constituted the major portion of Division activity in FY 1969. More than 6,400 requests for various types of technical assistance from roughly 1,300 different school districts were serviced. Approximately three-fourths of these calls were received from nearly 1,000 school districts in the 17 Southern and Border states. Table 1 provides summary information on technical assistance rendered through the Division of Equal Educational Opportunities during Calendar Year 1969.

A major service rendered by DEEO technical assistance resources is that of assisting school systems, especially, those in the southern States, with the development of comprehensive desegregation plans. During Calendar Year 1969, Division staff, and Center and SEA Title IV personnel developed 892 such plans for 569 different school districts throughout the Nation. To date, approximately one-third of these plans have been accepted and implemented by their respective school boards. See Table 2 for a list of school districts aided with plan development.

Prior to January 1, 1969, the Division had been involved in assisting less than a dozen school districts under court orders with desegregation plan development. During Calendar Year 1969, the number of requests for aid with plan development in such districts increased markedly. Of the total 892 plans developed, 278 were for districts desegregating under court orders; the majority of which were located in the 11 Deep South States.

Although requests for assistance with plan development increased sharply in 1969, a substantial number of calls were received for those other aspects of technical assistance which are necessary to facilitate plan implementation and the orderly disestablishment of the dual school system. In excess of 5,000 requests from school districts for services other than plan development were serviced through the Division's assistance resources. Table 3 includes, by State, detailed data on technical assistance services rendered during Calendar Year 1969.

Technical assistance resources of the Division receive requests for help from several sources including local education agencies, the Office for Civil Rights, Department of Justice, and State education departments. Most of the requests are received from local education agencies. During the period under review, 4,847 requests representing three-fourths of the total 6,456 calls for assistance came from local school districts. Additional information is provided in Table 4 which summarizes, by region, the number of technical assistance requests by source.

In connection with their technical assistance function, University School Desegregation Assistance Centers sponsored a variety of training programs ranging from one-day "drive-in" workshops to short-term (6-8 week) summer institutes. During Calendar Year 1969, the 16 Centers reported a total of 678 training programs involving nearly 53,000 participants from 661 different school districts. Table 5 gives data, by Region and Center, concerning training programs operated during FY 1969.

Tables 6-11 contain detailed information concerning the technical assistance activities of Regional Offices, Centers and State Education agency units during Calendar Year 1969.
